JOHN D. SHEA

SENTENCED TO HANG TO-DAY FOR THE MURDER OF POLICEMAN

The Prisoner to Meet His Doom on November 1, Unless the Supreme Court Helps Him Out—Judge Edwards Passes Sentence—Points Bullet

John David Shea, the murderer of Police Officer Patrick Doran, was sentenced to hang in the Criminal Court.

Mr. Norman, I call Court this morning. As Judge Norman said, the Court is in the presence of the time Shea was convicted, he thought that I should qualify him from passing sentence on the man and called Judge Edwards of St. Charles to the bench. I am sorry. When the Criminal Court opened this morning, the Criminal Court assembled the bench with Judge Edwards and introduced the latter to the members of the bar, stating at the same time that Judge Edwards would hold the Court. The defendant called out and stood at the rail beside his attorney, Thomas B. Harvey.

"Mr. Shea," began the Judge, "the record of the case shows that you are a man convicted of murder in the first degree, now charged with the same crime. I have seen fit to make the verdict, the Court has sustained it and the verdict is against you. The only thing remains for the sentence of death to be passed upon you. I am here for that sole purpose, at the request of Judge Normale, who is absent. I am here to pass sentence on you as Prosecuting Attorney in the case. In passing the sentence I would ask you, Mr. Shea, if you have anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon you. I am asking this, of course I do not mean to have

"I have nothing to say," said Shas, "except that I am innocent." "That being the case," said the Court, "I shall pass it by, and merely read the less sentence which the jury has imposed on you. I shall pass it in the form of a sentence." THE SENTENCE. Sentence was then pronounced on Shas follows: "Inasmuch as you, for your offense of murder in the first degree, are charged in the indictment, and in pursuance of the verdict heretofore rendered, have been found guilty, and adjudged by the Court that you be taken from this place to the place whence you came, this day, the 6th day of September, 1887, on which day you were taken from the place whence you came to the city of St. Louis, and there, on said day, at the hour of twelve o'clock, in the forenoon of said day, you be hanged by the neck to the gallows, and there remain, until between the hours of six and 11 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, you be hanged by the neck to the gallows."

"And may God have mercy on your soul!"

Mr. Harvey prayed for an appeal from the decision of the court below, and an appeal could not be perfected until sentence was passed, and as Judge Edwards had passed the sentence he maintained the right to appeal.

THE APPEAL.

The appeal was granted, Circuit Attorney Closson was appointed to argue the case, and understood that he thinks Shea may have forfeited his right to appeal by leaving the city.

It is not known whether or not an action of Judge Edwards in sentencing Shea, holding him was not the proper power to perform the duty.

A STAY.

On Friday, Mr. Harvey's stay of execution was granted until the 15th of June, to give him time to prepare his case to pass upon the matter. Mr. Harvey wanted an indefinite stay, but the court would not grant it. The appeal is all perfected, and all that remains is for the clerk of the court to prepare the record and file it up.

court remained perfectly calm. His sentence was being passed upon him. When the court concluded he was taken back to jail.

Mr. Harvey's objection to Judge Edwards passing sentence on his client was to save any possible appeal. He was not sure that there has never been a decision of the State Supreme Court on a case of this kind, and he was not sure that his attorney would have saved the exception, the points on which Mr. Harvey hopes to reverse the verdict.

On this paper. One is the separation of the jury, he claiming that the jurors were permitted to see the witnesses and to hear the testimony had all been in, which is contrary to law. He also claims that the case was tried in the first degree, lacking deliberation. He claims it was conducted in a manner that was not authorized by being struck over the head by an officer with his club.

Decision was caused by the man whom Shea killed the elements of murder in the first degree to exist, and the jury was sustaining the court on this point. The point on which he defended most rely, and claim to be sure of is the fact in account of decision lately given by the Supreme Court on the point, is as follows: Shea could not get a change of venue nor a jury from the county, because it was claimed that neither the Criminal nor Circuit Court had the right to grant the change of venue. The Supreme Court has now decided that the change of venue law operates the same in St. Louis as in any of the counties of the State.

W. H. Nichols, a Sheepman, Mysteriously Murdered at Fort Chanbourne.

BALLINGER, TEX., July 22.—News has just reached here of the assassination of W. H. Nichols, a prominent sheepman living on the edge of Green County, near Fort Chanbourne, last Sunday. Mr. Nichols was aged 40 and single. He was living with a family named Manderle, and employed the male young man as a messenger. Manderle's young daughter requested Nichols to herd the goats of which he (Manderle) had charge, and Nichols did so. This time Manderle told him, and that was the last seen of his alive. That night the dog brought the sheep home, while the boy hid in the bushes. The murderer, having been shot in the back with a Winchester, after which the murderer placed the body of the victim in the open field, fired a bullet through the brain and literally buried the face to a crisp.
